Gave them something to think. A: I drew a picture of a landscape after my sister died, to process my emotions at that sad time and even though I feel I have drawn more accomplished work, it is this picture that I am most connected to and fond of. All in all, this project is fairly simple.

A: I certainly have a designated place to write and it is my small writing room with a big window overlooking my garden, just a strip of a room, too small for a bedroom and fairly roughly painted. The title comes from a poem that recounts the true story of an orphanage devastated by a hurricane in coastal Texas around the year
