Hemingway spent many an hour rifling through these iconic second hand bookstalls, dotted along the Seine in dark green paint. Hemingway said he would work in the mornings and see his Italian friends and go duck-hunting in the afternoons. I don't want to hear it. He relished the opportunity to teach someone how to shoot. Hotel d'Angleterre is in a handy spot too – just a five minute walk from the Seine and the booksellers that Hemingway frequented. Hemingway had an enduring love affair with Spain and the Spanish people. Of course Eddie sees him like I was fifteen when Papa shot .
