I will not provide a spoiler as to how they turn out, although the second one has been in the news. However, the views expressed here, once stripped of ritual condemnations of bureaucracy, is not easy to distinguish from that of Gordon Brown.

Policies would be chosen for their appeal to the material interests of these

Author: Dave Morland. The chapter suggests that, when situated alongside the practices of new social movements associated with the anticapitalist protests, the poststructuralist perspective affords insight into how new modes of anarchist practice are emerging. His research interests include British foreign policy since discourses of Euroscepticism in Britain, and critical historiography.

The guest lecturer, Dr Oliver Daddow, associate Professor at the University of York, has three interconnected research interests: firstly, British foreign policy since ; secondly discourses of Euroscepticism in Britain; and thirdly critical historiography, which breaks down into two specialisms: historical theory and how politicians use and abuse history in making foreign policy.
