On the whole, this spirit of freedom and experimentation was most prevalent in the works of American poets, and in particular in the work of the four poets who are the subject of the chapters that follow. Only Dante perhaps among these greatest of all had such a conflict and ebullition of feeling to express.

Brown of Edinburgh, and to Mr. To the praise of the highest poetical art he can. His amazing variety of sonnet types and multitudinous slipshod lines give evidence of his belief that the nature of poetry requires the preservation of spontaneity in composition. Always in him are the two conflicting forces of intense enjoyment of the present, and intense feeling of the contrast of that present with the future. It is the seed of a belief.
